“There are no rules for good photographs, there are only good photographs.”

- Ansel Adams
Outline

- the pictorial elements of photography, i.e. the design in the 2D picture frame
  - line and form
  - pattern and texture
  - tone and color

- pictorial design
  - symmetry and balance
  - framing
  - common compositions

- things we won’t talk about today
  - situation, storyline, viewpoint, field of view, focus, lighting, exposure, color balance, post-processing
Learning good composition

- there are no rules
  - there are only tools and heuristics
- like describing wine with words, they don’t mean much
  - they merely give us a framework for thinking about issues
- the best way to learn is to take lots of pictures
  - think about the issues as you take them
  - critique your photographs, and have others critique them
- look at good photographs by others
  - most useful if you’ve also tried the same thing yourself
Lines as a pictorial element

Ansel Adams,
Aspens, 1958
Arrangement of lines
Lines as a decorative element
Lines that lead your eye to the subject

Hiromu Kira, The Thinker

(London)
Lines that lead your eye to the subject

- the lines don’t need to be man-made, or smooth

(Bryan Peterson)
Raphael,
Galatea, 1513

(Gardner)
Form - lines with meaning

(Bryan Peterson)

first shot

second shot
Form - lines with meaning

Edward Weston, Pepper No. 30, 1930
Shape - readily identifiable form

- backlighting draws attention to shape

(Bryan Peterson)
Pattern - repeated forms

(Bryan Peterson)

first shot

second shot
Pattern - repeated forms

Abhaneri Stepwell, Rajasthan, India
Frederick Evans,
The Sea of Steps -
Wells Cathedral, 1903
Rhythm - a looser kind of pattern

(Freeman Paterson)
Texture:

fine patterns

- early product of f/64 club
- sharp focus, smooth papers
- reaction against Pictorialists

Ansel Adams, Boards and Thistles, 1932
Texture

- co-founder of f/64 club with Ansel Adams

Edward Weston, Dunes, Oceano, 1936
Frank Lloyd Wright, Fallingwater, 1934
Lighting as an aid to pictorial design

Fluor Garduño,
Basket of Light, Guatemala,
1989

(London)
Tone as a pictorial element

Robert Mapplethorpe
Diego Velázquez, Las Meninas, 1656
Color as a pictorial element

(London)

(Hedgecoe)

warm

cool

pictorial
Color as an accent

(Hedgecoe)
Encircled by color

(Hedgecoe)
Giovanni Bellini, Altarpiece of S. Zaccaria, Venice, 1505
Color as rhythmic accent

(Hedgecoe)
Peter Paul Rubens, The Judgement of Paris, 1636
Diego Velázquez,
Las Meninas, 1656
Pictorial design

- symmetry and balance
- framing
- common compositions
Symmetry

- deliberate symmetry
- off-center placement of main subject underscores the asymmetry of the architecture
Symmetry

- approximate symmetry

- symmetry with off-center accent
Balance

• symmetrical background + dynamic, unbalanced foreground

(Freeman Paterson)
Framing
More dynamic framing

- shadow edges complete the frame
- slashing diagonals create tension

Dennis Stock,
James Dean,
1955 (London)
The picture frame

(first shot) (Bryan Peterson)

(second shot)
Common compositions

- Upright equilateral triangle
  - Calm stability, power
- Diagonal
  - Tension, discord, dynamism
- S-curve
  - Motion, sensuality
  - Eye flow
- Rule of thirds
Raphael, Madonna with the Goldfinch, 1506

Titian, Madonna of the Pesaro Family, 1526
