Below is a well-known composition grid based on proportions, a subset of which forms the rule of thirds. Other lines included are the center and quarter lines. As well as diagonals across the image and to the center of the image.

Using the top toggle, you can choose to turn off all lines besides the center lines and rule of thirds. Using the bottom toggle, you can choose to turn off the lines.

Here are a few sample images that use some of these composition lines other than the rule of thirds, such as the center, quarter and diagonal lines.
